How to become a good cook

We all have friends who can magically whip up a delicious dish without a recipe and using only what is in their cupboards. It may seem like they were born great chefs but they also had to learn from nothing and continue to build from their experiences each time they cook. If you want to become a natural in the kitchen, there are a few steps to chew over.

First, remember that you are just a beginner. You will need a lot of practice and a lot of outside help; the latter can come in the form of books, websites, and even friends. Second, don't be scared of making mistakes; learn from them (although it is a good idea not to practice when you have important company coming over for dinner). Third, find a good, classic cook book and cook everything in it. You will soon learn the basics of cooking and see what ingredients go well with each other. Fourth, start buying kitchen gadgets and higher quality ingredients. Now that you have the basics down, you will be able to see and taste the difference with this boost in quality. Check out tips for advanced cooking, too, and use them with your new instruments. Fifth, try new things; add spices and herbs. If ingredients smell good together, they will also taste good together. Finally, be patient and don't give up. You may not be like the pros but you'll be good enough!
